The Shark Cage Program for Young Women: A human rights approach to gender violence and healthy relationships

What is the Shark Cage Program for young women?

The program consists of seven ninety minute sessions of mixed activities for young women aged 13 - 16. All sessions are comprehensively detailed in a program manual that is provided along with comprehensive digital resources to training participants. The program is designed to complement other Respectful Relationships programs aimed at young people. This program specifically provides young women with a female centred space to address issues that may be more difficult to explore with men present. The program is consistent with Federal, State & Territory directives to incorporate educational programs addressing violence against women & respectful relationships into school curriculums.

The program was co-developed by a psychologist and teacher to meet a demand for a youth and school friendly version of the highly successful and evidence based adult Shark Cage program that runs Australia wide. The 2018 pilot program of the Young Women's Program demonstrated that positive shifts in participants attitudes, behaviours and knowledge relating to key program objectives occurred after completing the program.

Who is this training for? Professionals who work with young women between the ages of 13 & 16 in school or other support settings. The program creates space for young women to explore sensitive issues relating to gender, sex, relationships and identity. For this reason, the training is for female only professionals who would like to become accredited to run the program for young women at their school or service. Training participants will need to feel comfortable talking about sex, diversity in gender, sexuality, gender inequality and violence.

This training is part of an accreditation process. Participants need to have completed the prerequisite training in The Shark Cage: A Practical Framework for prevention and addressing re-victimisation for girls and women.
